Anali Zavoda za povijesne znanosti Hrvatske akademije znanosti i umjetnosti u Dubrovniku

During the evaluation process, the Editorial Board of the Anali consistently applies ethical principles and professional standards. All manuscripts undergo a double-blind peer review process, and any necessary revisions to the text are incorporated prior to the publication of an issue. If an author notices a significant error in the article after publication, they are obliged to notify the Editorial Board, which will publish a notice of correction in the next issue of the journal.

Retraction of Published Articles

- Retraction at the author's request: If an author identifies an oversight after publication that affects the accuracy or credibility of the results, they may request a retraction of the article. In the online edition, the article will remain accessible via its existing link, but marked clearly with the notice "Retracted at the author's request".
- Retraction by the Editorial Board: In cases where editors, reviewers, or readers identify unethical conduct, data falsification, or failure to comply with research standards, the Editorial Board will initiate an investigation. If a violation of ethical principles is confirmed, the article will be retracted and marked in the online edition as "Retracted by the Editorial Board", while maintaining an active link.

The entire retraction process is conducted in accordance with the guidelines of the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE).
